Some demonstrate they are independent and self-motivated individuals with initiative to achieve goals, and communicate effectively– in other words, they have many of the soft skills employers seek. Maybe these are the reason more and more people are choosing Online Learning.

Online degrees are no cakewalk; it takes a great deal of self-discipline, motivation and drive to complete a degree without the limitations and schedule imposed upon students by traditional colleges. Also, the people who enroll into distance learning courses tend to do so because they have professional/financial responsibilities that take up a lot of their time. Juggling college, work, and family is not easy, and those who successfully do so would obviously be an asset to any organization they are part of.

I agree. Online degrees are not easy to pursue. As it only depends on your determination and motivation, you need to stay put and linger on till the time you are through.

Yes. Online learning is not a simple thing. Most of the people thinks that it was easy to get certified if they go for online courses. it depends upon the learners motivation and self effort to complete the course successfully.
